MARCH

PARADOXICAL tho' it be, the greater the wealth of appliances, the less is the power of using it. All the while that the technical and mechanical good quality is increasing, the dehumanizing of the workman is also increasing. As we become more and more able to print finer and more elaborate and delicate types of letter it becomes more and more intellectually imperative to standardize all forms and obliterate all elaborations and fancifulness. It becomes easier and easier to print any kind of thing, but more and more imperative to print only one kind. --Eric Gill

WHENCE did the wondrous mystic art arise,
Of painting speech and speaking to the eyes,
That we learn magic lines are taught
How both to colour and embody thought?
